Subject: Redistribution and Roleystone

The last state redistribution resulted in Roleystone being split in half.

Unlike many other metropolitan suburbs, Roleystone is a definite community, separated from other suburbs by bushland.

I notice that community of interest is one of the criteria mentioned in the redistribution literature so please this time put all of Roleystone into one electorate.

Apart from anything else, the chaos at the polling booth at the last election had to be seen to be believed as the border ran past the polling booth. The booth staff were tearing their hair and the party booth volunteers spent more time educating electors on what electorate they were in than urging them to vote for their party - this is not the job of party volunteers - it is the job of the WAEC.
